Chicot Primary School Wins Student Video Contest

The Arkansas Department of Education announced that Chicot Primary School in the Little Rock School District won the Education for a New Generation Student Video Contest.

The contest featured student-created videos showcasing the benefits and positive changes Arkansas Common Core State Standards have made on schools, students and teachers.

“All of the schools that participated did an outstanding job of showing how the standards have benefitted their schools,” ADE Commissioner Dr. Tom Kimbrell said. “We congratulate Chicot Primary for being recognized as the contest winner.”

A seven-member panel representing various educational partner organizations chose Chicot’s video out of 25 submissions. Chicot’s entry was chosen based on content, creativity, technical quality and overall presentation.

Covenant Keepers Public Charter School at Little Rock placed second, with Cedarville High School receiving third.
